The problem

Today, each client's context lives in notebooks, documents, phones and memory. There are simply too many places. Sessions start by searching instead of listening.

Less searching, more listening. Before each session, the context, the last note and what was agreed are on one screen.

Where we are now

A working MVP in an 8-week pilot with up to 10 professionals (from 24 Oct 2026). We are not selling yet: we are learning.

The pilot question: when a professional comes back to ÉBAN, can they pick up where they left off, and do they find enough value to keep using it?

Next: a version for social organisations (2027), built on what the pilot teaches us.

How it works: a simple cycle

1. Context
   Who the person is and what matters to them.
2. Session note
   What happened, in the professional's own words.
3. Next steps
   What the two of them agreed.
4. Preparation
   Before the next meeting, everything on one screen.

Step 4 · fictional content

Only the professional sees it
Each professional sees only their own records. Clients are identified by codes, not names.

Data in the EU
Stored in the European Union, with a GDPR data processing agreement for every professional.

Trust first
No artificial intelligence on people's notes. Data is never sold.
